Improve What People Do by Increasing What They Know

It is true that “people only can do what they know.” Unless they are willing to know new things, change is impossible.

Learning to lead requires us to learn how to learn. Acknowledging, “I don’t know what I don’t know,” is an essential first step for life-long learners.

Three-Dimensional Leadership seminars will give your people the tools to grow from a loosely associated group of individuals into a well-focused, God-honoring, challenge overcoming team!

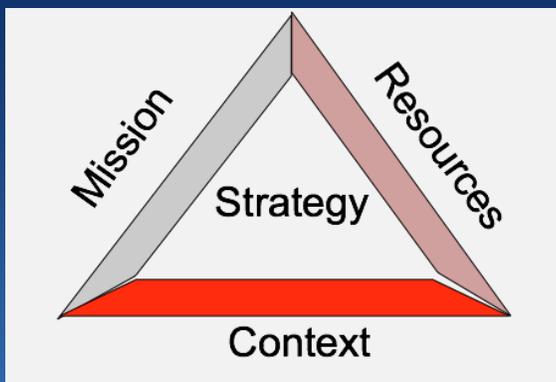

I-D leaders think it’s all about “me.”
II-D leaders must overcome “us vs. them” thinking.
III-D leaders focus on “we” all are in this together.

*Effective Leaders
Model: Mission Matters
Most; Rally Resources and Convert within the Context*

III-D Leader MRC training transforms organizational behavior by helping those from the boardroom to the mailroom to get a holistic view of the organization, by keeping in focus the mission, resources & context relationship.
